Overview

Becoming a CMC accredited Mediator is a two-stage process. The first requires the completion of a 40-hour foundation training programme. This ensures you have the required level of theoretical and practical knowledge to progress on to practice. However, if you wish to obtain professional body membership as a registered Civil & Commercial Mediator, you will need to compete a second stage, which consists of observation and professional practice requirements.

According to the Civil Mediation Council, their statistics indicate that over the last 10 years roughly 7-10% of those completing foundation training went on to attain CMC Membership status*. Further investigation revealed that the observation requirement for registered status constituted a significant barrier to new mediators engaging with the CMC.

In February 2021 the CMC re-designed their membership, creating new classifications. For those newly graduated from mediator training the Associate Mediator category has been specifically created. This category carries the same insurance, code of conduct and complaints procedure commitment as the current Registered Mediator status. Essentially this allows mediators to begin gaining experience in a professional and regulated manner whilst they work towards successful completion of the observation requirements of Registered Mediator status

There is an expectation that newly trained mediators will have access to opportunities to observe a mediation case, before progressing to co-mediating and finally taking a lead.

Finding an Enhanced Supported Practice is, in our view, key to accessing observations and casework.

Enhanced Supported Practice

Collis Mediation Ltd have designed an Enhanced Supported Practice which consists of 10 hours of supported practice. This is broken down as follows.

Stage 1.

- 6-hours Prep and Observation Opportunity with Casework- 2no (4-hours observation with 2-hours of pre-casework)

Stage 2.

- 3-hours Co-Mediation Opportunity with Casework- 1no (2-hours co-mediation with 1-hour of pre-casework)

Stage 3.

- Reflective Practice Consultation (1-hour of reflective mentoring)

Upon completion of the three stages of the Professional Practice Programme, Collis Mediation Ltd will provide a full breakdown of your observations, casework, and co-mediation practice, enabling you to apply for Professional Body Membership and Registered Mediator Status.
